PUBLIC COMMENT
Patron Yoshiko Saheki from Shoreline urged the Board to eliminate overdue fines as a matter of policy. She reminded the Board that it is its responsibility to determine whether the System keeps or removes fines. She said staff would adjust to having less revenue if fines were eliminated, and in her opinion, it is the Board’s job to eliminate what she considers a regressive revenue source.

STAFF REPORTS
Director of Information Technology Services (ITS) Sergio Razo gave an update on the new equipment in KCLS Service Center room ZAB, which now supports hybrid meetings. Hybrid meetings allow some people to attend in person and some to attend remotely. The new equipment was purchased with funds from an American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) grant; it enhances the overall meeting experience, and adds value to all our stakeholders, including staff, patrons and community members. The equipment features two screen carts for displaying remote participants, eight laptops, new cameras and integrated audio.

Public Services Specialist Annie Poyner spoke about Study Zone Plus. Prior to the pandemic, Study Zone was a long-standing program which offered tutors for K-12 students in the library buildings. During the pandemic, the program shifted to an online format and was rebranded as Study Zone Plus because it expanded beyond the initial scope. In addition to online tutors, it now includes Reading Buddies, Math Club, as well as Kids and Teen Talk Time. Attendance has steadily increased in the 18 months since the program’s expansion. There have been over 700 student visits each month in 2022. The shift to the online format also has created an access point to library services that did not exist for some students in the past. Librarians have been able to connect these students with library cards and are assisting with book checkout and other library services.

When students log in to Study Zone Plus, they are welcomed by a greeter, who asks which activity they would like to do that day. Based on their answer, they are assigned to one of four breakout rooms: tutoring, Reading Buddies, Math Club, or Talk Time. Students can return to the main room, or lobby, and request to move to a new activity. The majority of visitors participate in two or more activities per visit. Math Club has been a surprise hit with students. This program utilizes high school juniors and seniors seeking volunteer opportunities as instructors with younger students who need math support.
